

Pavol "Stick" Rusnák

Pavol Rusnák is a co-founder, CTO and core developer of SatoshiLabs, where he leads the development of software and hardware projects such as Trezor, the first hardware wallet. Pavol is an open-source and cypherpunk enthusiast, who is also interested in artificial intelligence and cognitive science in general. In his spare time, he works on award-winning, hi-tech, experimental interactive new media installations. He has contributed to many security industry standards and is well known to the world's cryptocurrency community as one of the most influential visionaries and innovators.
